THROUGH THE FLOOR

The inmates of Fulton County Jail Attempt to Escape.

As Mr. Pool, one of the assistant jailers, was sitting in his office at the jail, Sunday morning last, he heard a terrible racket within the prison. Getting up and going to the door, he was very much surprised to see that one of the planks of the floor had been torn up. Noting this, Mr. Pool immediately secured the prisoners in their cells and then sent for Mr. Green, the sheriff, after which a careful investigation was begun. It was found that only one plank had been removed and that was done by the use of a small rod of iron which had been pushed through a small hole in the wall and then used as a lever. A further investigation revealed the fact that Tom Bates, the murderer of Judge Moore at Jonesboro, who has been chained to the floor of his cell since his conviction, was the one who did it.

For quite while Mr. Green was at a loss to know how the plank had been broken and what plan had been laid for an escape, but after awhile he ascertained all. Among those confined in jail is Judge Wilkes, a negro man, who is awaiting a trial for assault with intent to murder. Soon after Wilkes' incarceration he began making a rebellious and disagreeable disposition. So far did he go in his disobedience of the jail rules that on Thursday last Mr. Green was compelled to place him in the dungeon, which is directly under the cell in which he was confined. During his sojourn in the dungeon Wilkes survived the torture and while he was removed from the prison he was informed that the plank had been broken and the easiest thing in the world to get out of the prison. He then told them that the plank had been broken and the easiest thing in the world to get out of the prison. He then told them that the plank had been broken and the easiest thing in the world to get out of the prison.

An Appeal to the People

INTERNATIONAL COTTON EXPOSITION, DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, ATLANTA, GA., AUGUST 29, 1931.

To the people of Georgia: The legislature having refused to make an appropriation for the purpose of making an exhibition of the great natural resources of the state at the International Cotton Exposition, to be held within the next three months of this year, the responsibility of such an exhibit now rests upon you and I cannot refrain from an effort to impress upon you the importance of such an action in this matter. County and local organizations, even at this late date, are able to prompt and united action to make a creditable exhibit.

Handreds of thousands of strangers will be the exposition, and never in the history of the state has there been such an opportunity to favorably present to the world the great possibilities of the state and the advantages it offers to the employment of its people.

Apply for and secure the space necessary at once. In addition to our effort to secure exhibits of natural products, I would urge the organizations referred to, to see that the manufacturing interest of the state is well represented. Also of the arts and sciences. Make the most of the opportunity. Let the state be known throughout the world. Let the people of the state be known throughout the world.
